Choosing A New Police Chief

A message from Councilmember Tom Huynh

In recent months, the West Valley City Police Department has faced a number of challenges, including the retirement of long-time Police Chief Buzz Nielsen. As West Valley City administration and elected officials navigate these challenging times, our priority has been finding a good candidate who can lead the Police Department, build trust within the community and reinforce the positive relationship between our police officers and our residents.

To find the best candidate, West Valley City has conducted a nationwide search for the new police chief. Dozens of applications were received from across the country, and initial interviews were conducted with each candidate, narrowing the field to nine. On June 24 and 25, all nine candidates were invited to West Valley City to be interviewed in-person by a carefully selected committee of West Valley City elected officials, senior staff members and administrative staff members.

To ensure the best candidate was selected, five interview groups were created: Oral Interview, Internal Investigations & Discipline, Media Relations, Organizational Effectiveness & Cultural Change and Upper Management. Each group rigorously questioned and tested each candidate, scoring them individually until the field was again narrowed to the top three candidates. These top three were then presented to City Manager Wayne Pyle for final review.

The selection process has been a very detailed and thorough process, and each interview team has worked together to provide the best possible candidate to lead our City's Police Department. In the coming weeks, the City Manager will make his final decision and present the top candidate to the City Council. I am confident that this process has been well planned with the best interests of our residents and our city in mind.

The best candidate for this position will be selected, and I look forward to our Police Department and our city continuing ahead in a good direction.
